“Water is life. We are the people who live by the water. Pray by these waters. Travel by the waters. Eat and drink from these waters. We are related to those who live in the water. To poison the waters is to show disrespect for creation. To honor and protect the waters is our responsibility as people of the land.”

Winona LaDuke, Mississippi Band Anishinaabeg White Earth Chippewa, Economist, Environmentalist, Writer

“Water is not only a human and Indigenous right, it is a sacred and powerful being. Our delegation is concerned that water is quickly becoming the next great commodity. But amidst the rampant corporate buy-up of water resources, there is a growing movement for the protection of water as a basic human right.”

Enei Begaye, Diné & Tohono O’odham, Activist and Advocate for Indigenous People’s Rights and the Environment
